

Mother Teresa

Mother Teresa was a Catholic nun who helped the poor, the sick, and the dying in India and around the world.

She was born Agnes Gonxhe Bojaxhui on August 27, 1910, in what is now Macedonia. At age 18, she joined the Sisters of Loreto, a Catholic order in Dublin, Ireland, to become a nun. The Sisters also did charity work in India. Two years later, in 1930, they sent her to Calcutta to teach in a high school.

When she took her final religious vows in 1937, she took the name “Teresa” in honor of St. Teresa of Lisieux.

In 1948, Mother Teresa became an Indian citizen. She also left the high school and the Sisters of Loreto to start her own religious order. She called it the Missionaries of Charity. It was dedicated to helping Calcutta’s poorest people.

By the 1960s, Mother Teresa and her nuns had set up orphanages for children, hospices for the dying, and homes for those with leprosy all over India. In 1965, they began to open missions in other countries, including the United States.

Many people were inspired by Mother Teresa. The Missionaries of Charity includes more than 4,000 nuns and more than 100,000 volunteers who help the nuns run schools, hospitals, orphanages, and food centers in over 120 countries. Many more people give money to support their work.

Mother Teresa received several international awards for her charity work, including the Nobel Peace Prize in 1979. Rich and famous people often came to Calcutta to meet her. Yet she remained a humble, simple person who always wore a plain white sari with a blue border.

Mother Teresa died on September 5, 1997. The government of India honored her with a state funeral. In October 2003, Pope John Paul II named her “Blessed Mother Teresa.” The Catholic Church may declare Mother Teresa a saint in the future.
